A large congregation heard Rev. Reynolds Sunday morning at the Baptist church. It was a powerful sermon on "Wonder of Divine Grace." All who have heard Rev. Reynolds speak in high praise of him, for he preaches nothing but the gospel.

A beautiful feature of the Sunday morning last services at the First Christian church was the splendid solo by Mr. Julian Tyng. He has a fine, rich voice and his singing the Sunday before, was, as well as on this occasion, was a source of great pleasure to those who heard him. Added to this, a strong sermon by Dr. Barnes made the day a memorable one.

Rev. J. N. Culton, of this city, preached at the Methodist church in Irvine on Sunday morning and evening.

The Union services held by the churches of this place at the First Christian church were well attended by a representative audience. Rev. E. B. Barnes presided.
Mr. L. P. Evans, Dr. J. G. Crabbe, Dr. E. C. McDougle made addresses of welcome to the new minister of the Baptist church, Rev. J. R. Reynolds, who very feelingly responded to the same. Rev. Reynolds and his family have received a kindly and cordial welcome to this city.

JAMES D. BLACK IS CANDIDATE FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP

James D. Black, of Barbourville, Knox County, has issued the following statement announcing his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor in the Primary Election, August 7, 1915.

Democratic of Kentucky: Recognizing, in the fullest sense, your right to choose at the Primary Election to be held in August, 1915, those whom you prefer to be the candidates of the party to be voted for at the general election in next November, I am a candidate, subject to your will to be expressed at said Primary Election, for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket. I am induced, in a measure, to make this announcement by a desire of my own to serve the people of our splendid State in the capacity of Lieutenant Governor, and also, in a measure, by suggestions of a few individuals whose personal and political friendship is real and in whose judgment I have and ought to have confidence. My past fealty to the Democratic party may be accepted by you, I confidently trust, as a sufficient guaranty that I shall, whether nominated or not, give to the ticket you may name and the principles for which our party stands, very faithful support, for that course has been my habit at all times since reaching legal age. If nominated and elected Lieutenant Governor, I promise you and the people of Kentucky to bring to the discharge of the duties of the office the very best service of which I am capable. Whether or not I am equipped to properly discharge those duties, it is not for me to say. I submit that to your judgment and decision. I believe in a just and wise economy in public as well as in private business, and cordially agree that no one should be entrusted with responsible office who is not able and willing to perform his whole duty to the public whose interests he asks to be commissioned to serve. I believe those on whom the Constitution places the duty and responsibility of legislation for the people of the State ought to industriously employ the time the General Assembly may be in session, to needed legislation, complete that as quickly as a proper regard for the best interests of the State will permit, and then adjourn, diligently avoiding every unnecessary expense to the people. I have no doubt that those who have to do in an official way with the money of the community, or charged with the administration of public affairs, ought to act in relation to such, according to that high standard which the most prudent, careful, just and intelligent exercise in the conduct of their private business. If elected Lieutenant Governor, that standard shall be my guide in the labor the law assigns to me. In submitting my candidacy, I invite the scrutiny of the people of Kentucky as to my fitness for the preferment thus sought.

Very respectfully,
JAMES D. BLACK.

Collinsville, Ill.—"I suffered from a nervous breakdown and terrible headaches, and was tired all over, totally worn out and too discouraged to enjoy life, but as I had four in family and sometimes eight or nine boarders, I kept on working despite my suffering. I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and within two weeks I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and now I am a well woman."

—Mrs. ANA BECKER, Collinsville, Ill.

There are hundreds of nervous, run-down, overworked women in this vicinity who are hardly able to drag around and who are sure would be wonderfully benefited by Vinol as Mrs. Becker was. The reason Vinol is so successful in building up health and strength in such cases is because it combines the medicinal tissue building and curative elements of cod's livers together with the blood making, strengthening properties of tonic iron. We ask every weak, nervous, run-down man or woman in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

THIRD EPISODE. June Finds Work.

CHAPTER I.

DOWN the dark boulevard from Brynport weaved and bumped and rattled a lone taxicab, with a high powered limousine steadily gaining on it. A black Vandyked man in the limousine tossed something out of the window as he passed the taxi at breakneck speed. He snuffed as he heard a loud report like the explosion of a revolver, then another. He knocked on the driver's window, and as the car came to a stop he looked behind. The taxi had drawn up. He hastily replaced under the seat the hamper in which he had broken to bits all its porcelain and glassware. A tall, gaunt girl, distinct, in a maid, was out, impatiently surveying the flat tires of the taxi, when the limousine, its bright dome light suddenly flashing up, backed alongside. The black Vandyked man stepped down.

"Perhaps I can offer your passengers the use of my machine," he suggested. That relieved young woman opened the door of the taxi and poked her head inside.

"There ain't anything else we can do, Miss June," she whispered. "I suppose not," came a sweet voice from the taxi, and the face of a beautiful young girl appeared in the window. She started as she saw the black Vandyked man, Gilbert Blye. He stood hat doffed, politely waiting their acceptance.

"Perhaps I can offer the use of my machine."

"You'd better go, miss," husked the taxi driver. "This old tub'll be here tomorrow morning." June Warner slowly stepped down. "Thank you," she managed to murmur. "I beg of you not to mention it. The favor is to me," Blye gallantly returned, while the maid began to transfer from the taxi to the other car arm load after arm load of unpacked clothing.

Around the curve behind them there dashed another limousine and a runabout in time for the occupants to see Gilbert Blye assisting June into the luxurious limousine. They also saw the eight cylinder machine leap forward. Blye, unconscious that they were being pursued, as was the girl, thought that he heard a shout as they gathered speed, and he looked back in time to see first the runabout and then the limousine swerve and slow down and to hear two loud bangs. He grinned. His driver grinned. The taxi driver grinned. Then they whizzed away. "Why, you are the little runaway bride, the girl in the watch!" said Blye, leaning forward.

"Yes," and June blushed.

She felt the black eyes of Gilbert Blye fixed upon her. Could it be possible that he had followed her? Oh, no! Still, he had her address in her watch and her portrait.

"You were kind enough on the train, Mr. Blye, to offer to let me buy my watch, and I'll take it now, if you please."

"I'm very sorry I haven't it with me. But I shall see you another time, I am sure." He came back from the for-

They were in the hall with the luggage when Honora let herself in. She seized the situation at a glance and without a word laid hold of the trunk. But Blye, aided by Scatt, dashed away.

Ned Warner meantime had driven straight to the apartments which he and June had fitted up. He leaped rapidly through the telephone directory, called a number and delivered his message. At the other end of the wire a red faced man listened and nodded, then called in from an adjoining room three men, who by some strange coincidence were lean and long and lanky. One was smooth faced and cadaverous of cheek, and one wore a sparse, haphazard black beard trimmed to a point.

There was a knock at the door. Three detectives had come from a private agency. Ned had given them a miniature of June.

Meanwhile Mrs. Blye in the presence of the parrot was also giving instructions to detectives. She gave them a photograph of Gilbert Blye and warned them that there was to be no publicity.

June, busy with her own thoughts, presently found the dark eyes of Marie at Blye's club the limousine stopped, while the black Vandyked man alighted. June smiled as she bade him good night, but she was very thoughtful nevertheless and troubled. Blye stood on the steps of the club and gazed after the receding car with a smile of satisfaction.

The limousine sped on to the address which Blye had given the driver. June studied the house earnestly. It was a smart looking building. The windows were brilliantly lighted, and in the parlor were three young ladies in rather striking evening dress. June gave the driver the address of a modest hotel.

Halfway to their destination June changed her mind. The modest hotel, she remembered, had a blinding lobby, and there was no way to pass in or out without being stared at. She gave the driver another address. Marie saw June's panic in her face. She found the little hands of June cold with nervous collapse.

"East," she snapped to the driver. "I don't know the number. I'll tell you when we get there."

A few minutes later they stopped in front of a dingy looking building with no light in the vestibule. Marie jumped out and rang the doorbell. A woman came to the door. They exchanged a few brief words, and Marie ran down to the limousine.

"It's all right, June," Mrs. Boales had a black back room for you and a cot for me."

June stepped from the car with a sigh of relief. A home of any sort was welcome now. It had been a long and exciting day.

"I know the room, Miss June," said Marie, sweeping past with her arms full of bundles.

Blye was in front of his club with a gray mustached, jovial looking, pink faced man when the car returned.

"Where did you take her, Scatt?" Blye asked.

"She wouldn't stop at Mother Russell's," began Scatt confidentially. "She—"

"We know that," interrupted the gray mustached man, Orin Cunningham.

"There was no number on the house, boss, but I can find it."

"Drive us there," directed Blye. Down on the dingy east side street he tried earnestly to pin down Scatt's dazed memory. Up and down Blye moved, seeking in every window for some sign of the runaway bride. Suddenly his eye caught the glint of something in a vestibule. He ran up the steps. The glittering object was a hunk on a dainty little slipper, one which June's collier had carried down to the taxi for her when she had stolen her clothes and Marie from her father's house. He jotted the number of the house in a memorandum book.

CHAPTER II.

JUST where the narrow lane of the terminable Mott street construction work the Moore limousine overtook Honora Blye's electric. Mrs. Blye let Ned alight. She drove home. Her husband had long since presently her pin down Scatt's dazed memory. Up and down Blye moved, seeking in every window for some sign of the runaway bride. Suddenly his eye caught the glint of something in a vestibule. He ran up the steps. The glittering object was a hunk on a dainty little slipper, one which June's collier had carried down to the taxi for her when she had stolen her clothes and Marie from her father's house. He jotted the number of the house in a memorandum book.

CHAPTER III.

JUNE hastened quite cheerfully about her toilet the next morning and chose a little dark gray suit as being the least conspicuous, for now she was to be a working girl.

Presently there was a wheezing and a rustling at the door and a scurrying as if some one were bending to listen at the keyhole, a silence and then a knock. It was Mrs. Boales.

"There's a young lady to see you, Miss—"

"Justin," snapped Marie, who had given that name by a brilliant flash of intellect.

"Yes, Mary," wheezed Mrs. Boales. "That wasn't the name the young lady gave. First she said Moore, and then she said Warner, and then she said that Justin was right, she guessed, but she said 'June' every time, and she brought this slipper. Is it yours?"

"Who is the young lady?" asked June.

"Miss Thomas, Miss—ma'am." Mrs. Boales constantly roving eye came to rest on the slipper and the plain gold band on June's finger. "She said she came to see you about a position."

June cast down her eyes in troubled thought. Blye—he had said he would send some one for her in the morning. Was there no evading the man's kindness? How had he— Absurd! Of course he had got her address from the driver of the car. She went down the stairs in worried concern, but in the doorway of the parlor she stopped in astonishment as she saw her caller. For a moment the two beautiful young women stood studying each other in admiration; then the brunette sweet-forward with a gracious smile. "Later June called on the stairs, 'I'll be back some time this afternoon,' Marie." Then June went out with Tommy Thomas!

Honora Blye, sitting at her parlor window and exchanging the thoughts of the morning, felt her head green and tired familiarly, saw longing across from her house a long, lean, lanky man with a sparse black beard. Presently the doorbell rang, and one of the wide, low detectives came in with an air of great excitement.

"Nothing doing, ma'am," he reported. "Blinky Peters and I watched your husband's club all the time. Sneaky Tavis has shadowed Warner's apartment, and I'm to go let him get some sleep."

"Are you sure my husband and that girl haven't left the city?" she asked. "They didn't go from any regular railroad station," stated Bill Wolf, with conviction.

Ned Warner at about the same time received a report of similar discouragement from the long, lean, lanky detective. There had been found no trace of June Warner nor of Blye.

Without thought of detectives, but keeping a watchful eye lest she should see Ned or her parents, June went boldly forth. She was thoughtful as Tommy Thomas assured her into a waiting hansom, for this friend of Gilbert Blye's was expensively gowned and seemed to live in unusual freedom.

In one of the big department stores June was taken up to the managers of the French salon; then Tommy went away, and presently June, whose face and figure, carriage and manner had been grimly inspected and approved, was being led to a room of parading in a gown and of displaying the proper degree of elegant insolence to impress customers.

A sleepy looking colored maid came in, and some girls brought in gowns shrouded in white laces.

"The canary, Ma'am," ordered the manageress, poking her head between the curtains, and the sleepy colored maid slowly took down the bag containing the canary evening frock.

"June," answered that young lady. "Your name here will be Therese." Added the manageress. "You haven't done this before, have you?"

"No," June's voice was faint and weak. She had a queer feeling in her stomach, and her eyes began to widen again as she studied an appalling array of cosmetics.

"Never mind. I'll be in and make you up."

At last June was to know how it felt to earn one's own living. She had a mingled exhilaration and depression in the contemplation of that remarkable experience.

As June peered out of her dressing alcove a middle aged man and woman passed in a vigorous argument. The woman wanted money, and the man would not give it. Then June was called and came out and paraded slowly down between the two long rows of chairs. There were a hundred or more women and some men. Occasionally one of the women beckoned to her and made her turn and walk away and come back.

She had displayed perhaps half a dozen gowns when the middle aged man and woman obstructed her passageway as she came out of the alcove. They were still in an energetic dispute about the money. A hundred dollars the woman wanted, and she had to have it! The man finally left her.

A lady from a group where a gray mustached man with a pink face and jovial eyes was standing came over and spoke to the woman. The woman listened, her eyes following June as she walked in a beautiful black velvet dinner gown. The woman spoke to a saleslady.

"I want that gown!" she snapped. "Certainly, madam," said the saleslady.

"Tell her to take it off now," ordered the customer. "It's a charge account."

So June was unceremoniously rushed into her alcove and divested of the black velvet gown, while the charge account went up. The gown was taken away. The woman had a girl carry it to the credit department, said she had bought the gown, didn't care for it and wanted the money, $135.

The manager of the credit department expostulated with the woman as far as diplomacy would permit. It was not unusual to have credit customers bring back goods and demand cash, but it was unusual to have it done so quickly. However, she was a good customer, and her bills were always paid.

The woman rejoined her friend in front of June's dressing alcove and triumphantly displayed the money. The husband of the customer came up, furious. He had been to the credit desk and discovered the deception. A little group quickly formed around the middle aged husband and wife.

It was at this moment that Blye appeared by the side of the gray mustached man, and with him was Tommy Thomas! Blye nodded his head to Cunningham and said something to Tommy. She smiled with quite evident reluctance across the door.

"Your turn, dear," said the manageress to June and frowned in the direction of the group.

"I give you everything you want," charged the man, a woman in this town has more. You can go into any shop in New York and order what you like, and I pay your bills. Yet you graft on me!"

"You give me everything but money," rustled the woman. "I beg for every cent I get."

To give on the one hand and to beg on the other! It was a striking illustration of the principle which had led June away from Ned. That the woman is and should be an object of charity, depend upon the bounty of the man whom she marries! No matter how generous the man might be nor how penniless, the principle was the same.

The gray mustached man called the manageress.

"I would like to see that little white dress," he said, indicating June, who had on another frock.

"Certainly," replied the manageress. She hurried over to June and said, "Come, Therese."

A warm hand caught June's wrist, and a voice said:

"You're stunning! What's the fight about?"

Tommy Thomas it was. The two girls stood listening. The gray mustached man rose. "If this is the sort of attention I receive in this shop I will give it no more of patronage," he declared indignantly to the manageress.

Blye, smiling, saw the superintendent enter and called his attention to the gray mustached man, and the superintendent hurried over and met Orin Cunningham, whose cheeks puffed with anger.

"What is the matter?" asked the superintendent.

"Matter?" blazed Cunningham. "I've been asking this saleswoman for half an hour to let me see that little white dress," he pointed to June, "and I am ignored, sir!"

The superintendent turned to the manageress. "Madam Effing, what is the trouble?"

"It's a new model," explained the manageress. "I can't get her to pay any attention to me."

"Then discharge her at once!" ordered the superintendent and turned on his heel.

Madam Effing stalked straight over to June.

"You are discharged," she snapped. "Oh!" June was stunned.

"No excuses, please!" grated the manageress.

"Are you sure my husband and that girl haven't left the city?" she asked. "They didn't go from any regular railroad station," stated Bill Wolf, with conviction.

Ned Warner at about the same time received a report of similar discouragement from the long, lean, lanky detective. There had been found no trace of June Warner nor of Blye.

Without thought of detectives, but keeping a watchful eye lest she should see Ned or her parents, June went boldly forth. She was thoughtful as Tommy Thomas assured her into a waiting hansom, for this friend of Gilbert Blye's was expensively gowned and seemed to live in unusual freedom.

In one of the big department stores June was taken up to the managers of the French salon; then Tommy went away, and presently June, whose face and figure, carriage and manner had been grimly inspected and approved, was being led to a room of parading in a gown and of displaying the proper degree of elegant insolence to impress customers.

A sleepy looking colored maid came in, and some girls brought in gowns shrouded in white laces.

"The canary, Ma'am," ordered the manageress, poking her head between the curtains, and the sleepy colored maid slowly took down the bag containing the canary evening frock.

"June," answered that young lady. "Your name here will be Therese." Added the manageress. "You haven't done this before, have you?"

"No," June's voice was faint and weak. She had a queer feeling in her stomach, and her eyes began to widen again as she studied an appalling array of cosmetics.

"Never mind. I'll be in and make you up."

At last June was to know how it felt to earn one's own living. She had a mingled exhilaration and depression in the contemplation of that remarkable experience.

As June peered out of her dressing alcove a middle aged man and woman passed in a vigorous argument. The woman wanted money, and the man would not give it. Then June was called and came out and paraded slowly down between the two long rows of chairs. There were a hundred or more women and some men. Occasionally one of the women beckoned to her and made her turn and walk away and come back.

She had displayed perhaps half a dozen gowns when the middle aged man and woman obstructed her passageway as she came out of the alcove. They were still in an energetic dispute about the money. A hundred dollars the woman wanted, and she had to have it! The man finally left her.

A lady from a group where a gray mustached man with a pink face and jovial eyes was standing came over and spoke to the woman. The woman listened, her eyes following June as she walked in a beautiful black velvet dinner gown. The woman spoke to a saleslady.

"I want that gown!" she snapped. "Certainly, madam," said the saleslady.

"Tell her to take it off now," ordered the customer. "It's a charge account."

So June was unceremoniously rushed into her alcove and divested of the black velvet gown, while the charge account went up. The gown was taken away. The woman had a girl carry it to the credit department, said she had bought the gown, didn't care for it and wanted the money, $135.

The manager of the credit department expostulated with the woman as far as diplomacy would permit. It was not unusual to have credit customers bring back goods and demand cash, but it was unusual to have it done so quickly. However, she was a good customer, and her bills were always paid.

The woman rejoined her friend in front of June's dressing alcove and triumphantly displayed the money. The husband of the customer came up, furious. He had been to the credit desk and discovered the deception. A little group quickly formed around the middle aged husband and wife.

It was at this moment that Blye appeared by the side of the gray mustached man, and with him was Tommy Thomas! Blye nodded his head to Cunningham and said something to Tommy. She smiled with quite evident reluctance across the door.

"Your turn, dear," said the manageress to June and frowned in the direction of the group.

"I give you everything you want," charged the man, a woman in this town has more. You can go into any shop in New York and order what you like, and I pay your bills. Yet you graft on me!"

"You give me everything but money," rustled the woman. "I beg for every cent I get."

To give on the one hand and to beg on the other! It was a striking illustration of the principle which had led June away from Ned. That the woman is and should be an object of charity, depend upon the bounty of the man whom she marries! No matter how generous the man might be nor how penniless, the principle was the same.

The gray mustached man called the manageress.

"I would like to see that little white dress," he said, indicating June, who had on another frock.

"Certainly," replied the manageress. She hurried over to June and said, "Come, Therese."

A warm hand caught June's wrist, and a voice said:

"You're stunning! What's the fight about?"

Tommy Thomas it was. The two girls stood listening. The gray mustached man rose. "If this is the sort of attention I receive in this shop I will give it no more of patronage," he declared indignantly to the manageress.

Blye, smiling, saw the superintendent enter and called his attention to the gray mustached man, and the superintendent hurried over and met Orin Cunningham, whose cheeks puffed with anger.

front of the coffee-blye told the time from a tiny gold watch, the only one he carried now.

"The runaway bride!" laughed Cunningham.

"I'm in a hurry," Blye explained. "I told you when we came here that I had to leave at 8."

"Of course we know where you are going," Tommy challenged him.

June was sitting in her lonely little bedroom waiting for Marie, whom she had sent out to a drug store for toilet articles. Mrs. Boales suddenly knocked. "A gentleman to see Miss Justin," she announced, "a gentleman with a black beard and a diamond ring and a gold filling in one tooth. He says it's Mr. Blye. I lit the parlor lamp for him."

June wondered what she should do. Ned Warner, riding aimlessly and disconsolately on a street car and looking out earnestly at every passerby, suddenly caught sight of one pedestrian who made his heart jump. Marie! She was jogging industriously along with a bundle under her arm and a very clear idea of direction apparent in her very speed. Ned ran after her. At the Boales door Marie heard the sound of running footsteps, turned with normal curiosity, saw Ned, let herself in at the door and closed it with a slam, snatched on the night lock and flew upstairs.

"He's coming, Miss June!" she cried. "Mr. Ned!"

Ned! June's heart leaped within her, and for a moment she was flooded with a mad impulse to run down and be folded in his arms and forgiven. No! She must be strong for her own sake and for his, for the sake of their ultimate mutual self respect and the fullness of the love which can be founded on no other stone.

"Meet me at that little hotel to which we were first going," she directed Marie hastily, and, snatching up her hat and coat, she hurried down the stairs and out of the back door.

June had forgotten Gilbert Blye absolutely, but he had not forgotten her. He had been requested to wait, and Mrs. Boales, having correctly guessed that June wanted the invaluable Marie present at the interview, had been kind enough to inform Blye to that effect. Blye saw June in flight and followed her.

Mrs. Boales answered a violent knocking at the door to find herself confronted by the wild eyed Ned Warner.

"Where is my wife?" he demanded. "What's her name?"

"No. There's a Mrs. Womple here, but she says her husband's dead, and a Mrs. Smith. Her husband gets home every Saturday night. And—say, what's her first name?"

"June. She's here! I saw her maid just come in! Marie! Where are they?"

"What's her?" Mrs. Boales was pleased. "Some calls her Moore and some Warner and some Justin, but her name's always June. There's a black whiskered man here to see her now. Name's Blye. He's in the parlor." And she craned to at the parlor door with scarcely a sniff of her position.

Exploits of Elaine

I turned and saw Elaine looking over our shoulders, fascinated. It was evidently the first time she had realized that Kennedy was in the room.

"How can you tell anything by that?" she asked.

"Why, easily," he answered, picking up a glass paper weight which lay on the desk. "You see, I place my finger on this weight—so. You could see it even without the powder on this glass. Do you see those lines? There are various types of markings—four general types—and each person's markings are different, even if of the same general type—loop, whorl, arch or composite."

He continued working as he talked. "Your thumb marks, for example, Miss Dodge, are different from mine. Mr. Jameson's are different from both of us. And this fellow's finger prints are still different. It is mathematically impossible to find two alike in every respect."

Kennedy was holding the paper weight near the bust as he talked. I shall never forget the look of blank amazement on his face as he bent over closer.

"My God!" he exclaimed excitedly, "this fellow is a master criminal! He has made stencils or something of the sort on which, by some mechanical process, he has actually forged the hitherto infallible finger prints!"

I, too, bent over and studied the marks on the bust and those Kennedy had made on the paper weight to show Elaine.

THE FINGER PRINTS ON THE BUST WERE KENNEDY'S OWN.

Farmers' Big Rally.

Dr. Fred Mutchler, of State University, president of the Kentucky Farmers Union, will speak at the Court House in Richmond, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 1:30 o'clock, on topics of vital interest to every landlord and tenant in Madison county.

Dr. Mutchler is without doubt the best informed man in Kentucky on farming, farm conditions and farm possibilities in this State. For years he has owned and operated a farm in Western Kentucky and has been a highly paid official of the Government Agricultural Department. His farm extension work in the last three or four years has done more to advance agriculture in Kentucky than any one thing this State has had the benefit of in a generation. He knows your soil and what it will produce better than you do. Hear what he has to say about it.

All over the State farmers are organizing and discussing control and better prices for tobacco and other farm products. This meeting will mark the beginning of the forward movement in the county of Madison. He there—Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 1:30 p. m.

What the Farmers' Union can do for the farmer Dr. Mutchler will explain to you at the following places:

Richmond Saturday, Feb. 13, at 1:30. Cottonburg, Monday night, Feb. 15, at 7:30 p. m.

Burton School House, Tuesday night, 16th, at 7:30.

Newby court house, Wednesday night, 17th, 7:30.

College Hill, Thursday, 18th, 7:30.

Waco High School, Friday night, 19, 7:30.

These talks will be full of valuable information for the farmer. T. H. Collins, the farm demonstrator, will be on hand and have something worth telling. Everybody invited. J. Ed Tudor, 5-21 President.

Rheumatism In Joints

Pain Disappears and Swelling Vanishes in a Few Days.

That is what happens if you use Rheuma, the wonderful remedy that B. L. Middleton and all druggists sell on the "money back if not cured" plan. There is a vast amount of rheumatism in this vicinity, and if you know any sufferer, call his attention to this generous offer. Rheuma is a quick-acting prescription. You will know your rheumatism is leaving 24 hours after you take the first dose. It dissolves the uric acid and drives it from its lodging place.

Mrs. Alice A. Brown, Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "For seven years I suffered greatly with rheumatism in my hip; at night I was scarcely able to sleep. One bottle of Rheuma cured me."

That sounds miraculous, but Rheuma does miraculous things. Fifty cents a bottle of B. L. Middleton, and all druggists—Adv. feb. 3 10.

GREAT MAN'S DEATH

Country He Served So Well Remembers Lincoln's Work With Gratitude.

AT TWENTY minutes past ten o'clock Friday evening, April 14, 1865, Abraham Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth in the back of the head behind the left ear and mortally injured. At 22 minutes past seven o'clock the next morning, Saturday, April 15, 1865, he died.

There have been many and vast changes since that fateful day, and the prayer which Lincoln prayed that the country might be one again has been answered in a way that would have rejoiced his great heart. Not an anniversary of his birth and death has passed since his cruel taking off on which some tribute has not been paid to his memory, and so it will be to the end of time among generous Americans, wherever their residence or inherited sentiments; for, however he may have been misjudged in the confusion and stress of antagonistic opinion, there is none now who does not praise him for his courage and his faithfulness to his honest convictions.

He was born in Kentucky February 12, 1809, and died in Washington April 15, 1865, in his fifty-seventh year at the very zenith of his powers. The books are full of the story of his life and work, but there are still many interesting facts connected with him that have not yet been noted, notwithstanding the industry of those who have collected great masses of everything they could find in any way connected with his life and death.

Mr. Lincoln, as everyone knows, was shot by Booth while he was attending a theatrical performance at Ford's theatre in Washington. "Our American Cousin" held the boards that night and Laura Keane was playing the part of Florence Trenchard for the last time. She had already performed the same part for a thousand nights. Five years before she had played the role at McVicker's theater in Chicago the night of the day on which Mr. Lincoln was nominated for president by the Republican convention. In May, 1860, and all unconscious of the terrible tragedy, she played with uncommon cleverness, and while yet the theater was ringing with laughter and applause, came the crack of the pistol shot from the president's box that plunged the country into mourning.

After Mr. Lincoln had been shot he was removed across the street from the theater to the residence of William Petersen, a highly respected merchant tailor, who lived directly opposite the playhouse, at 516 Tenth street. This house is still standing, as is also the old Ford theater, and both are now owned by the government. There have been few changes in the Petersen house.

For 40 years Osborn H. Oldroyd has been devoting himself to the assembling together of an invaluable collection, in which are included more than three thousand relics, which constitute, as Elizabeth Porter Gould has said, "one of the most interesting and valuable ever collected in behalf of a human being." The collection contains 250 funeral sermons, about seventy pieces of music, a thousand volumes relating to Lincoln, 300 portraits, busts and medals, photographs of Booth, pictures of the assassin, the family cradle in which the Lincoln children were rocked, an original black locust rail split by the young man, then never dreaming of the place he was to fill in the history of the world; the family Bible from which Lincoln's mother read to him when he was a boy, and literally thousands of other things in some sort associated with the murdered president.

"The First American."

As Lowell said of him, Lincoln was the first American. Whitman calls him "the sweetest, wisest soul of all my days and lands." And today he, the leader in a great Civil war, is loved and revered by the South as by the North. Some of the noblest tributes ever paid to him have been those paid by the Southerners. He belongs to the whole nation, and he is the only man since Virgil, a genuine tonic. Price $1.00. Madison Drug Co., Sole Agents—Adv. feb.

Loss of Appetite.

CATARRH OF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Peruna Saved Me

Mrs. Powers, whose address is given below her portrait, is an ardent friend of Peruna. She says: "I am thankful to tell you that my old trouble has never bothered me any since you received my testimonial. Any one wishing to know the facts in my case, if they will write me I will be glad to answer. Your medicine has saved me, and gave me perfect health. I frequently meet friends that knew me when I was in poor health. They ask me what has made such a change in me. I always tell them that it was the nerve remedy, Peruna. I shall praise Peruna as long as I live."

Catarrh of the Internal Organs

Mrs. A. T. Powers, R. R. 7, Box 121, London, Ohio, writes: "I write to thank you for the wonderful good your Peruna has done for me. I was a sufferer from kidney and bladder trouble for twenty-two years. Two years ago I began to take Peruna, and I only took about three bottles and today I can say I am a well person."

Catarrh is liable to affect any of the internal organs. This is especially true of the bladder, which is very frequently the seat of catarrh. This is sometimes called cystitis.

Those who object to liquid medicine can now procure Peruna in Tablet form.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most remedies in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough, but loosens and relieves it. It acts expectorantly and opens the secretory passages, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains an opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers—Adv. feb.

Cooper, "Tanlac Man," Gets Big Reception in Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 9.—Hundreds are now calling almost daily to meet L. T. Cooper, the noted visitor, and to find out just how his famous medicine, Tanlac, is sold, how it is prepared and what the preparation actually looks like.

In commenting upon the rush to meet Mr. Cooper and obtain his celebrated medicine, the manager of the Taylor-Isaacs store, said:

"The success of the opening of the introductory sale of Tanlac exceeded our expectations. We have been agreeably surprised by the knowledge the public seems to have of the preparation. While many came just to meet Mr. Cooper and see what the medicine really looked like, equally as many came prepared to obtain the preparation. These people simply asked for Tanlac, and the facility with which the medicine was distributed throughout the day proved somewhat of a revelation to many of our older men."

Mr. Cooper said: "I am, indeed, gratified to see such marked enthusiasm, and I feel justified in predicting that Tanlac will prove just as successful in Louisville as it has in the larger cities. I do not believe that I am overestimating the success of the medicine when I state that I am confident that from three to five thousand people will call and get Tanlac this week."

Mr. Cooper was asked about the charitable work he intended to perform in Louisville. He replied: "Yes, it is true that I have written the Associated Charities asking that organization to furnish me, as soon as practicable, with the names and addresses of at least fifty of the most deserving poor families of your city, whom I propose to help. I have also written St. Joseph's Orphans Home, offering certain contributions. I shall communicate with similar institutions within a few days with the view of endorsing their noble efforts by assisting them in some substantial way."

In conformity with my usual custom of encouraging the hospitals, I will make special concessions with reference to supplying such institutions of your city with Tanlac, as I consider the preparation a superior tonic in all cases of convalescence."

The famous medicine, Tanlac, can now be bought in Richmond only at H. L. Perry's drug store.

LOCAL ITEMS.
David McCord and Miss Nannie Hayden, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Thorpe, went to New Albany, Ind., last week and were married. The groom is 23 years old and the bride only 16. Both are members of some of Madison's best families. The married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe, who accompanied them, eloped last fall to the same Green and were married. Mrs. Thorpe is a sister of David McCord, who is the gentleman who protested so vigorously when she went away. It must be "catching." We wish the young couple much joy and a long life together.

Dr. Ira Brown Oldham, of Speedwell, this county, was married to Miss Mary Newland, daughter of Rev. Christopher Newland, a prominent Baptist minister of near Stanford, on the evening of Jan. 30th, at the residence of the bride's father.

Caldwell Public School opens in the new building next Monday. Hons. C. F. Burnam and W. B. Smith will deliver short addresses as will also City Attorney P. H. Sullivan. The Richmond Silver Band will be in attendance to discourse music at proper intervals.

The stockholders of the Estill County Deposit Bank have decided not to resume business. The receivers have had the sale and other furniture removed and re-leased the building. Cashier McDowell in the meantime continues silent and his whereabouts are still a matter of uncertainty to the bank officials, although it has been reported that he is somewhere in Mexico.

PERSONALS.
Miss Lou Smith, of Nicholasville, is the guest of Miss Rosa Lee Alverton, on High street.

Mrs. B. L. Middleton has returned to Richmond, after a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Sharpe—Shelbyville Sentinel.

Miss Nettie Hume, of Irvine, came down Monday. She was en route to Frankfort to visit her relatives, Rev. D. Clay Lilly and family.

Messrs. W. R. Shackelford, Daniel Breck and Waller Bennett, of Richmond, came down last week to attend the German—Frankfort Capital.

Miss Pauline Smith, who has been visiting Mrs. S. S. Deering, in Nicholasville, has returned to Richmond.

CAUSE FOR ALARM

Catarrh a Danger Sign. Hyomei The Remedy—Guaranteed By B. L. Middleton.

There is no more annoying, likewise serious ailment than catarrh, which is indicated by sniffling, raising of mucus and frequent colds. If it is not cured it will surely affect the lining of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing.

Hyomei is the effective and reliable remedy for all catarrhal affections—breathes it, using a small inhaler that comes with every complete outfit. The antiseptic medication of Hyomei simply has to reach all the sore, raw and inflamed surfaces of the air passages. Its healing begins at once—you feel better after the first treatment—even almost hopeless cases respond quickly.

Hyomei is inexpensive, and surely gives quick and permanent benefit. B. L. Middleton sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan. You certainly can afford to try this harmless remedy when there is nothing to pay if not benefited.—Adv., Feb. 3-10.

When Buying Baking Powder

For this is the baking powder that makes "the baking better."

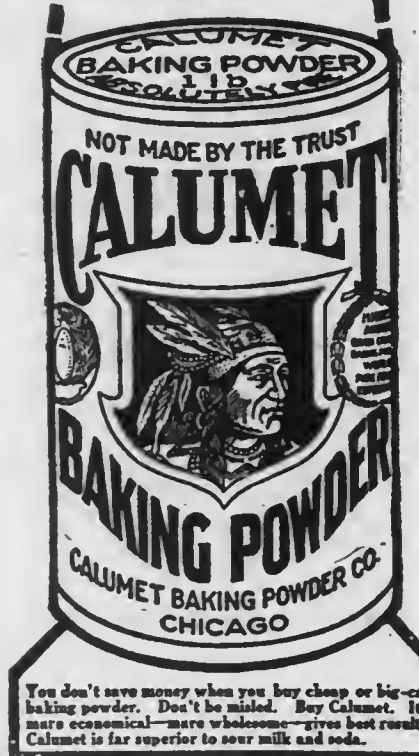

It leaves the food evenly throughout; puff it up to airy lightness, makes it delectably appetizing and wholesome.

Remember—Calumet is moderate in price, highest in quality.

Ask your grocer for Calumet. Don't take a substitute.

Received Highest Awards

World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago, 1904; St. Louis, 1904; Paris, 1905.

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-size baking powder. Don't be misled. Buy Calumet. It's more economical—more wholesome—gives best results. Calumet is far superior to any other brand.

A PRAYER.

Dear Lord strengthen, guide us To walk each day aright; May we know in the evening shadows That we have truly won the fight.

Only Thy wonderful love Can carry us safely through; So take our hand and lead us To all things pure and true. Show us the path of duty, Make the way so plain, That its joy and beauty Will o'er shadow the road of pain.

Our spirits will soar and wander 'Till they reach their heaven at last, And voices will softly whisper Peace, the shadow-time is past.

SPEEDWELL.

There is very little sickness in this section, considering the climatic conditions.

Mrs. Clarence Haybourn, who has been confined to her bed for the past three weeks with fever, is improving rapidly. We are glad to report.

A ten weeks subscription school began at this place Monday, 1st inst., with Mrs. Arch Hamilton as teacher.

Mrs. Charley Spowden, the recently married daughter of J. W. Moberly, of Brassfield, has been visiting her home folks.

There is a great "Rock" craze among our young people, who are spending enjoyable evenings visiting from place to place in the community.

It has often been said and believed that Job's patience would never be duplicated, but we have an example in this section in the person of Wm. Evans, local concrete and bridge expert, who for the past two months has been getting in some pillars for a bridge across Viney Fork of Muddy Creek, but despite obstacles he a few days ago finished the job.

MILL GROVE.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hiale has been quite ill with scarlet fever, but is now much better, we are glad to say.

Nathan Cotton has matriculated at Berea College.

Most of our farmers have sold their tobacco, but most of them are not pleased with prices received.

The many friends of Mrs. Wm. White will be glad to hear that she is much improved and will soon be able to be out again.

PAINT LICK.

E. L. Hedrick has leased his farm to Albert Forrester and has taken rooms with Mrs. Martha Ely.

Minnie Ramsey, daughter of Burdette Ramsey, was taken to Danville and operated for appendicitis. She is much improved and will soon be able to come home.

Geo. Todd, wife and little daughter have moved to his farm above Paint Lick, recently purchased from Mrs. Wiley.

The Ladies Missionary Society of Old Paint Lick Presbyterian church held its annual meeting with Mrs. E. H. Walker and reported more than $130 realized from the year's work.

Miss Maggie Francis is with friends in Richmond.

The Baptist church here sent delegates to the Sunday-school Convention at Richmond on the 5th Sunday.

H. L. Wallace made a business trip to Lexington last Friday.

The Parents-Teachers Club failed to meet last Friday on account of bad weather.

Mrs. C. E. Williams and little son, of Madison, Ind., are the guests of relatives here.

Clark Election Against Saloon Held Invalid.

The local option election, held in Clark county on September 23, resulting in a victory for the drys, was on last Wednesday held invalid by a majority of the contest board, Judge Stevenson dissenting in his opinion.

ENDORSED AT HOME

Such Proof As This Should Convince Any Richmond Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Richmond adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

Mrs. Pearl Boen, 109 Hallie Irvine street, Richmond, Ky., says: "My back ached and my kidneys were disordered. At times I was nervous and didn't sleep well. I felt little like getting about, in fact, I was miserable in every way until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Middleton's Drug Store. I began to feel fine immediately after I commenced taking them and their continued use made me better in every way."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Boen had. Foster-Milburn Company, Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness results. It is not until the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; time cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give the Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free. P. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, etc. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. Adv.

When you go home have a nice home to go to

Dear Amy—I don't wonder that Jennie's husband stays down town nights so. She doesn't seem to care a thing about fitting her home. Fred would stay home more, I know, if Jennie would make it more congenial for him. He won't mind giving her the money to buy furniture with either, if she'll only go buy it and keep it looking right when she gets it. All she thinks about is how she looks when she is out—not what her home looks like when Fred is in. Bye, bye Lou
